"Demographic Trends in the Adirondacks"
Wednesday, October 7th, 2015
Rockefeller Institute of Government
411 State St., Albany, NY

MODERATOR: Matt Ryan
WMHT's New York Now

The Adirondack Research Consortium, a not-for-profit organization, facilitates research to help sustain and improve the Adirondack Park's public and private lands, waters, and communities through the Annual Conference on the Adirondacks, specialty workshops, and the Adirondack Journal of Environmental Studies (AJES) now published in partnership with Union College. The Consortium is headquartered on the Paul Smith's College campus.

For more information go to www.adkresearch.org.

The Nelson A. Rockefeller Institute of Government is a public policy research institute that conducts studies and related projects on state and local government and finance, American federalism, public management, and New York State issues. The Institute is located in Albany, New York, and is part of the State University of New York.

For more information go to www.rockinst.org.

The Consortium and the Rockefeller Institute have entered a long term partnership to host annual workshops on topics of importance to the Adirondack region. It is a shared vision to use these events to feature current and ongoing research to address relevant issues and shape future policies impacting the region.
