

THE ADIRONDACK
JOURNAL
of Environmental Studies

VOLUME 22
CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

Submissions will be accepted between January 5 and March 15, 2017.

The Adirondack Journal of Environmental Studies (AJES) is now accepting submissions for Volume 22, which will be published in the summer of 2017. Articles of a broad disciplinary scope will be accepted for review, including topics in natural and social sciences related to the region. Special consideration will be given to articles to be published in the featured section dedicated to women, leadership, and the Adirondacks.

AJES is a peer-reviewed journal of the Adirondack Research Consortium that serves to bridge informational gaps between researchers and those developing policies impacting the future of the region.

Through a collaborative partnership, Union College and the Consortium have co-published AJES beginning with Volumes 20 and 21 distributed in 2016. This collaboration has led to vast improvements in the journal featuring an upgraded format and enhanced content. The two most recent volumes can be found online in their entirety.

To submit an article for consideration, send the manuscript abstract and/or completed manuscript to Caleb Northrop at northroc@union.edu. Please include the title, keywords, and an estimated word count of the completed article.

PUBLISHED BY THE KELLY ADIRONDACK CENTER AT UNION COLLEGE
IN PARTNERSHIP WITH THE ADIRONDACK RESEARCH CONSORTIUM

UNION COLLEGE
FOUNDED 1795