

Photo by Mark Bowie

THE ADIRONDACK JOURNAL of Environmental Studies

VOLUME 23 CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

Extended Submission Deadline: February 3, 2019!

The Adirondack Journal of Environmental Studies (AJES) is now accepting submissions for Volume 23, which will be published in the summer of 2019. The featured section is dedicated to “Communicating Science and Policy.” While special consideration will be given to academic articles relating to this topic, articles of a broad disciplinary scope will be accepted for review.

Additionally, in our effort to showcase the many personal stories of the Adirondacks and to highlight the various ways in which they are presented and told, we welcome “Stories of the Adirondacks.” Though more informal storytelling than typical academic articles, these essays – rooted in history and a distinct sense of place – demonstrate our commitment to welcoming a broad spectrum of perspectives from our contributors.

To submit an article for review, please visit www.ajes.org for submission instructions and guidelines. Any questions can be directed to Caleb Northrop at northroc@union.edu.

AJES is a peer-reviewed journal of the Adirondack Research Consortium that serves to bridge informational gaps between researchers and those developing policies impacting the future of the region. Through a collaborative partnership, Union College and the Consortium have co-published three volumes since 2016.

PUBLISHED BY THE KELLY ADIRONDACK CENTER AT UNION COLLEGE
IN PARTNERSHIP WITH THE ADIRONDACK RESEARCH CONSORTIUM

UNION COLLEGE
FOUNDED 1795